Sede della Doc Prosecco

Treviso is called 'Little Venice' because of the numerous rivers wind between its houses, creating beautiful views and an ambience that changes with each passing hour of the day.

From the Sile to the Buranelli, from Cagnan to the Roggia, the rivers have shaped the architecture of the city. One can see mills and mill wheels that have since been converted into charming homes, along its banks a reminder of the 'farm' that Treviso once was under the rule of the Serenissima Republic.

"URBS PICTA"

Treviso is well known for its numerous buildings and houses that are decorated in this popular Medieval and Renaissance style. Despite heavy bombardments during the Second World War, one can still bear witness to unique frescoes adorning the houses of nobles and wealthy merchants by looking upwards whilst wandering through the streets.
